Putaruru Netball Centres Concussion Policy

NETBALL NEW ZEALAND CONCUSSION POLICY

Netball New Zealand recognises the need for a specific Concussion Policy to direct actions, responses and treatment of concussion of all Netball players in New Zealand.

Concussion is a mild traumatic brain injury (mTBI). While the incidence in Netball is low, concussion is becoming a significant public health issue and is increasingly more prevalent across all sporting codes.

As Netball becomes a faster and more physical sport, specific guidelines are important to protect the wellbeing and welfare of our players. The highest volume of concussions occurs among those aged 10 to 19 years. It is important in this developing age group to recognise the symptoms early to ensure treatment and prevent any longer-term consequences.

Concussion (and player wellbeing and welfare in general) is everyone's responsibility. Players, parents, coaches, and officials need to act in the player's best interests and their wellbeing/welfare by taking responsibility for recognising, removing and referring to a medical doctor any player suspected to have sustained a concussion. They should collectively ensure that appropriate concussion guidelines are followed.

- If a concussion is suspected, remove the player from the playing or training environment immediately and seek treatment from a medical doctor.
- If a concussion is suspected, the player must not re-enter training/playing on the same day unless cleared by a medical doctor.
- Manage all unconscious players using first aid principles. Call 111 immediately if a player has lost consciousness or has cervical (neck) pain. Do not move them.
- It may take hours (or even days) for symptoms to become obvious.
- A medical doctor's assessment, diagnosis and plan is paramount as diagnosis can be challenging and clinical judgement is required.
- A concussed player must stand down from competitive play until the concussion is fully resolved. The player must have been cleared by a medical doctor to return to competitive play, and have followed a return to play programme.

Putaruru Netball Centre request:

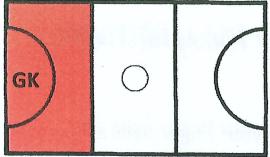

In the event of a child receiving any form of concussion symptoms or knocks to the head PNC would like the following to take place.

- Remove the child immediately from the game. This child is NOT to return to the court for any further games that night. (They can be replaced by another player.)
- Have the coach of the team contact the child's parent explaining what has happened.
- Add the child's name, school, position and a brief description of what has happened on to the back of the score card.
- In form the school of the incident.
- The school is to follow up with the child's parents' mid-week to check on the progress.
- The following week let the person in netball control what the outcome of the child was so that the child's name can be ticked off from the PNC Concussion registrar.

A full copy of the Netball New Zealand Community Concussion Guidelines will be held at control.
